

June 15, 1927

It would work out well to have the diplomas given just before the Benediction so that the graduates could then form in front of the stage for reception. It would be well to have printed on program instructions to start at the right end of reception line in greeting the graduates.

It worked out well this year to have these taking part on the program sitting on the stage back of the graduates.

People in general were pleased with the ruling that no presents should be given on the night of Commencement with exception of flowers.
